History

Two Mountain Winery is a family affair. Owned and operated by brothers Matthew and Patrick Rawn, their family has been farming the rich soil of the Rattlesnake Hills area of Washington State for more than half a century. In 1951, Phil Schmidt established Schmidt Orchards with 40 acres of peaches, apricots, prunes, and apples. Today, three generations contribute their talents and expertise to Two Mountain Winery and the 26-acre estate vineyard.

The small family winery produces a modest 3,000 cases annually, but is poised for growth under the leadership of the Rawn Brothers who believe great wine is the result of the perfect blend of elegance and fun.

After purchasing Two Mountain Winery and Estate Vineyard from their late uncle Ron Schmidt's estate in 2006, the brothers set out to put their own fingerprint on the family business by launching a new look for their classic, hand-crafted varietal wines. With new branding in place, Matthew and Patrick aggressively pursued distribution outside the state. Two Mountain wines are now available in four U.S. states and Japan, with additional markets to come.

Inspired by majestic Mt. Rainier and Mt. Adams that form the breathtaking backdrop of Two Mountain's 26-acre estate vineyard, Matthew has served as winemaker and vineyard manager for the winery since its inception in 2002. Patrick manages finances and day-to-day operations of the winery and vineyard. Two Mountain currently produces eight varietal wines, a dry rose' and a red blend, with the majority of grapes sourced from Two Mountain's estate vineyard.

Two Mountain Vineyard

Two Mountain's name was inspired by majestic Mt. Rainier and Mt. Adams that form the breathtaking backdrop the winery's 26-acre estate vineyard. Located in the Rattlesnake Hills region of the Yakima Valley - Washington state's oldest appellation - three generations have farmed the land since the 1950s. In 1951, Matt and Patrick Rawn's grandfather Phil Schmidt established Schmidt Orchards with 40 acres of peaches, apricots, prunes and apples. Matt planted wine grapes on the land with his uncle Ron Schmidt in Spring 2000 and crushed Two Mountain Winery's first vintage in 2002. Today, Matt and Patrick grow eight grape varieties in Two Mountain Vineyard: Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Chardonnay, Riesling, Syrah, Lemberger, Cabernet Sauvignon and Touriga Nacional.

The Cascade mountain range provides a wonderful rain-shadow effect on Two Mountain Vineyard, which is situated on a south-facing slope 1,198 feet above sea level. It is a very warm site, with an ideal 190-day growing season and annual precipitation of only approximately six inches. Warm days and cool nights provide the Yakima Valley with near-perfect growing conditions, allowing both red and white grape varieties to fully express their classic characteristics. During the last ice age, the great Missoula Floods deposited ancient volcanic sediment across the region, creating a rich blend of sandy and rocky soils that shape the distinct character of Two Mountain Vineyard.

“Standout Wineries: Horseback rides meander through vineyards, orchards and working farms – allowing plenty of time for barrel room tours and taking in the crisp fall foliage as you visit wineries such as...brand new Two Mountain.”

- Seattle Magazine, October 2008

“Be a winemaker (for two hours). Shadow Matt and Patrick Rawn, owners of Two Mountain Winery in Washington’s Yakima Valley. They’ll have you pluck and taste grapes, operate the crush machinery, and, finally, taste the vineyards’s wine.”

- Sunset Magazine, September 2008

“The Two Mountain 2007 Riesling is off-dry and styled down to the straight and narrow. It’s a high-falutin’ cowboy tootin’ mouthful of crowd pleaser with its wet sweetness or sweet wetness, depending on which of your three legs you’re standing on. Soft and sipable with all the “P” fruits revealed: pear, peach and pummelo – with a long glow of apricot and light honey. “

- Wine Press Northwest, Summer 2008

“Two Mountain 2004 Syrah: This dark, inky purple wine made from Yakima Valley grapes has soft tannins, but still has mouth watering acidity, with black berry, black cherry, smoke and leather flavors that create an elegant wine for smoked or grilled meats.”

- Seattle Magazine, August 2008

“One of Patrick’s goals for the winery was achieved when the new packaging convinced some national and international distributors to take on Two Mountain wines. Once available only in Washington state, the wines were placed in four states and Japan in early 2008.”
